

Resolution
Amending the Architectural Review Board
Architectural Design Guidelines
Jeff Kestenbaum, Liaison to the ARB
August 20, 2020

Background

The Architectural Review Board, after amending and restating the Architectural Design Guidelines earlier this year, have identified one area that can be revised or improved. This submittal has highlighted an area where the guidelines lacked specificity or in some cases, flexibility to reasonably apply the guidelines. The ARB also identified other changes to the verbiage. See attached.

The ARB Design Guidelines, as well as other lower level governing documents are evergreen in nature and as such, will be amended from time-to-time. Occasionally, they should be reviewed and amended to best address the current challenges in the governance of the IRCOA.

Proposed Resolution
